Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an angular velocity sensor having a vibratory element. 2. Description of the Related Art There has been known an angular velocity sensor for detecting an angular velocity around an axial direction by vibrating a vibratory element in a direction perpendicular to the axial direction with a Coriolis force generated by a detection object. Such an angular velocity sensor is described in, for example, Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2012-225738. The angular velocity sensor described in Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2012-225738 is illustrated in FIG. 4. In FIG. 4, an angular velocity sensor 501 includes a first substrate 503 and a second substrate 505. The first substrate 503 includes a vibrator 511, a first detection electrode 513, and a second detection electrode 515. The first detection electrode 513 is provided on a side surface of the vibrator 511, and the second detection electrode 515 is provided on a side surface of the vibrator 511 in an opposing relation to the first detection electrode 513. The second detection electrode 515 includes an elongated portion that extends in an axial direction of the vibrator 511. The second substrate 505 includes a third detection electrode 517 and a fourth detection electrode 519. The third detection electrode 517 is provided on a side surface of the vibrator 511 in an opposing relation to the first detection electrode 513, and the fourth detection electrode 519 is provided on a side surface of the vibrator 511 in an opposing relation to the second detection electrode 515. The vibrator 511 is vibrated in a direction perpendicular to an axial direction of the vibrator 511 with a Coriolis force generated by a detection object (not illustrated) that rotates around an axial direction of the vibrator 511. With the structure as described above, the vibrator 511 vibrates in the direction perpendicular to the axial direction of the vibrator 511 with the Coriolis force generated by the detection object that rotates around the axial direction of the vibrator 511. The vibrator 511 vibrates in the direction perpendicular to the axial direction of the vibrator 511 due to a natural frequency of the vibrator 511. Then, a voltage is output from the first detection electrode 513, and a voltage is output from the second detection electrode 515. The first detection electrode
