In short, every player can create a deck out of ten cards. Each player will hold a combined 15 cards and the points earned are based on how many variations you can create with those cards. For the cards to be combined they have to have a difference of at least one (not including colour, suit, or position of the rank). I'm trying to figure out a way to calculate the maximum number of variations that could be created by twenty people to see what variations occur the most. Can anyone tell me an algorithm to calculate this? Is there a name to this type of problem? I know it would help a lot if it was written down or described somewhere. I'm not sure if I'm looking for a name I'm looking for a description of it. A: Let x_i be the number of variations that can be created with the deck of player i (for $i \in \{1,2,3 \ldots, 20\}$). Then your problem is equivalent to finding the average: $$\frac{x_1 + x_2 + \ldots + x_{20}}{20}$$ Multiplying all the x_i together and dividing by 20 gives the best answer you can hope to get for the average. An easy way to calculate x_1 is to choose the 10 cards from a standard deck of 52 cards. Then $x_1 = 52$ possibilities. The other x_i are calculated similarly, but now you only have 15 decks of cards to choose from. The total number of possibilities is $52^{20} = 2595737628946710648192849507465127256920129189333360$ The present invention relates to an apparatus for producing dielectric foil, comprising a flat plate which is made of 3e33713323
