Battle of the Spartan Pass

The Battle of the Spartan Pass is actually more of a construction project than a game, but it might have turned out to be something quite significant. The goal of the project was to build a system of passageways through the cavern complex which could be sealed off behind a blast door that could be removed once the passageways and chambers had been built, much like a modern-day sewerage system. A quarry, during the process of being pumped out, sits at the northern end of the caves. It was decided to fill in this area of the quarry in order to take advantage of the natural flow of water to the north. To do this, a diversion tunnel was dug in the southern portion of the quarry to connect to a new section of drains, ultimately leading to the

What's new:

Fluorescence images {#s4-7-3} All the images were taken on the Nikon A1R confocal microscope using the 488 nm laser line with a Photometrics QuantEM:512 camera. A 20× (NA 0.75) or 60x (NA 1.4) Plan Apochromat objective was used with TRM gallium arsenide (GaAs) cooled (4--5 mW) 1.1 mm air-objectives in all cases. HeLa was plated at a density of 75,000 cells per 12 well plate. After 18 hr, transient transfections were performed by simply mixing the
