Motion Capture Suit The FIFA 22 motion capture suits are the first to fit on the player's skin, so they are lightweight and extremely comfortable. This makes it easier for players to move, interact, receive treatment, and change position during play. Combined with the newly created motion capture system, 22 real-life players were recorded playing a complete football match, scoring, dribbling, creating chances, assisting, and tackling. This required 11 players wearing camera suits and wearing reflective markers. David Ortdevil, FIFA 24's Lead Match and Gameplay Producer, said: "The FIFA 22 motion capture suits are some of the most comfortable football boots, to improve motion capture in FIFA we had to get the comfort right, and by improving the comfort we've given our motion capture cameras a much higher quality insight into what a real player experiences on the pitch." "We can see a difference in the quality of match and the feedback from players themselves, in addition to our own team, our analysts, coaches and developers we've built a new feedback process to ensure we can extract the right information from the data. We now have a clear picture of what it's like to play in the boots, and what challenges, situations and relationships players have in the boots." "We've used this information to provide an even greater level of detail to players around how the game is played, and the tactics that players are taking. A match in the boots is no longer just a set of calculations being made, it's also a whole range of occurrences players experience in that match." • See a tutorial for FIFA 22 motion capture data on how the data is being used. The Process As well as recording the real-life players, the created player still needs to be tested. As there's a significant difference between real-life and player models, for testing, seven players recreated the same actions and movements as the created players, to ensure the created player's stats are accurate. Once all the animations are in place, seven analysts from the FIFA 22 game team performed an intense full 90-minute match using the new created player. The analysts used their real hands and feet to perform actions, telling us which player moves and where they move to, how they perform certain actions such as controlling the ball, and giving feedback

What's new:

- OFFENSE - The ability to move the ball through space gives strikers all over the pitch that freedom to create chances like never before. Defenders can't roam anywhere they please, as AI pressure takes the heat off their back and takes much of the burden off their shoulders. Defenders quickly drop off into the defensive line to shield the ball, dictate play, collect the ball from underfoot and stop dribbles. Approaches come under enormous pressure and defenders cut out crosses and looping balls for defenders to pounce on.
- DEFENSE - The first of three, game-changing defensive concepts is "Direct and Indirect Intervention". No longer allowed to drift across the pitch, defenders are able to intercept an opponents pass, cross, or even tackle. All of the defensive actions that they once did in unison are now split into two distinct categories; Direct and Indirect. This new system contributes to the significantly more tactical display when defending, as defenders are able to address specific threats with immediate effect.
- Aerial Duality - Fifty-thousand passing animations allow players to execute 360-degree evasion while on the ground, creating more realistic challenges for both strikers and defenders. The ball's responsiveness also allows more players to participate in higher-speed duels, resulting in a more authentic pace of play. Go high to win!
- Ball and player movement AI - Artificial Intelligence now detects when the ball is coming towards the player, narrowing the time window for players to attempt highly-demanding challenges and controlling their movement more intelligently. The ball's unpredictability means that there is rarely ever a moment where a simple pass results in a turnover. This drives players to constantly look for different ways to receive the ball.

- Headers - Decent skill level and confidence in handling and shooting high-speed volleys is required to perform a successful header. All of the big goalkeepers are now more confident with the way they manage those long-range shots, and they can juggle the ball using a variety of different techniques, including chest balls and toe balls, much more naturally than ever before. The goalkeepers also more accurately react to give and take around the area, and there is no longer a distinction between a dive and a header, meaning that any action that results in a player getting the ball on the ground is defined as a header.
