What's New In Floating Clock?

Floating Clock is a Windows application which keeps tabs on time and day of the week. It is an attractive clock that stays in a semi-transparent background and follows the user's mouse. Floating Clock creates a clock window for you in the same way that Windows does and this enables you to see the time in a standard format. It displays the clock by either the hour, minute, and second, or the day, hour, minute, and second. You can open a link to a website such as Yahoo or Google to select a set of dates from which to choose, or you can enter your own set of dates manually. Additionally, you can use Gmail's time picker to select a time to be set as the current time. When you know an exact time to set, you can set it as the date's current time and it will be correct for that date. To align the clock to the user's cursor, you can drag it around the screen. A small double-arrow button appears in the lower-left of the clock, and you can drag this to reposition the clock. The clock comes in two colors: dark gray and black. Floating Clock Requirements: Floating Clock needs Internet Explorer in order to work. Floating Clock Installation: Floating Clock is easy to install. A single executable file can be run to install it and it will immediately appear in the Start menu. Alternatively, you can move it to a menu group where it will appear as a sub-menu. Floating Clock Features: Two operating modes: day/night Customizable clock face with shadows Show time in two different ways: sunrise/sunset and time Adjustable clock face size Brings up a menu whenever you use the clock Clickable numbers Mouse wheel to change time A string of seven different clock faces that are available for selection With Floating Clock, you can easily set a specific time on your computer by dragging the time onto a window. Once a selected time has been confirmed, an arrow will appear and the time will be changed to that specified. To change the current time, move the mouse pointer over the arrow until it turns yellow. If you want to move the time backward, hold down the left mouse button. If you want to move the time forward, hold down the right mouse button. Floating Clock Performance: Floating Clock is a friendly tool that works really smoothly. It takes little to no time to set the time,
