This is a classic Game of Death / battles / war. The main focus is a must have strategy game. As it was a fun historical video game, with a lot of blood, and violence. We added the whole storyline with the leaderboards for social media. Where it will be the most fun to play a leaderboard and collect the most game in a bloodiest war. =====MUSIC===== The music in this game is made, recorded and produced by me, at home. I think it's very good. Download for Windows • Steam ... 9/10 Played the game for over a year and it's still my favorite game. It's all about strategy. I would say that if you play a game that's about planning ahead and handling each scenario with care, this is the game for you. Bravada is a multi-stage strategy game that you play against different opponents, and the scenarios are randomly generated. In each scenario, you control multiple battalions, which can be deployed in multiple locations. In short, the game is about planning ahead, and executing plans (a bit like Age of Empires). While Bravada has been in active development since 2012, it was only released in December 2014 (in Early Access). The game plays best on bigger maps. There are three modes in the game: Practice, Casual, and Pro. Practice is for getting used to the game. Casual is the default game mode. Pro is for hardcore strategy gamers. The game has three interfaces. The first is the standard interface, where you can edit your commands, and view information about your battalions, etc. Bravada also has a Web GUI. It has a nice streamgraph, and other useful stats, as well as controls for editing your battalions, units, etc. The game also has an audio system. Controls are mapped to the usual keys, and there are sound effects that you can use to influence the game. You can also alter the music in the game with audio sliders. Some of the more important things in the game that you can control with the audio system: The rate at which your units march or march The speed of your units How well your units are aligned The sound of your units marching Whether your units get more or less focused Whether your units increase their movement speed

What's new in Neko Beach:

In New Trailer When we played Half-Life: Alyx we commented that the San Francisco airport serves as the perfect place to interact with a few of the game’s endgame scenarios. This reaction to ‘Triage at Dawn’ is backed up by the fact that we saw a new Half-Life: Alyx trailer that uses the vibe of the final hours of the game. GameSpot Spanish has translated the closed captioning in that trailer, and they suggest that Valve is tying up a few loose ends as what seems to be a massive ‘gorilla’ (Half-Life: Alyx foe?) looms closer for the player. The Half-Life: Alyx ‘final hours’ theme starts at 1:13 with the following: “With Alyx now approaching the final hours, Valve is taking a closer look at events which preceded the current chapter of the game, and players are being treated to two new videos in this regard. The clip first presents the Trial as another milestone where the titular hero must stop the massive monstrosity known as ‘The Raven’ on the realization that there is just too much radiation in the city to allow for someone to be infected.” Check out this trailer snippet below. The full version of the new trailer can be viewed here: Final Hours / Triage at Dawn (Half-Life: Alyx Endings) Compact edition of Latest News from Valve & Other Stuff The podcast is in full swing, and we just recently released episode 184. Unlike other episodes, this one actually has two different topics: the Half-Life: Alyx Reflections series continues, in the third episode we talk about the death and decay of Black Mesa, and we also have a list of the most ridiculous water physics in video games.
