Q: Samsung EVO 840 with 18.04 - Smart Storage ext4 does not recognize my SSD in partitions I recently installed 18.04 on my Samsung EVO 840 512GB USB portable SSD. The problem: I can't partition it using GParted unless I use the special mode, there exists no option to use just ext4. The SSD shows up as having 31,8 GiB formatted only(when using the special mode) Example: When I remove the SSD it shows the total space as 30,9 GiB. My question: How can I fix this? I assume it's because of the SSD but i don't know how to remove/modify it for something else to work. PS. I tried a second port second SSD an same behaviour. Thanks in advance, A: After several days, I have found the solution. This problem is common for SSDs, also with my harddrives. However, "just" the installation of 18.04 shows up this behaviour. I know it's the partitioning that requires special treatment. Solution: Ubuntu can auto format the partitions. To remove that you have to run: sudo blkid Then just run: gparted. Look for your SSD and simply click on it. It will only ask for format, cuz it recognizes format as new.

Fall Into the Other World: Fall Into the Other World An action-RPG masterpiece! Here's a game that you can enjoy for hours without feeling tired. You don't have to focus on defense, only having to think about how to make your enemies disappear. In this game, as a hero who wakes up in a world with no memories, you will jump into the world where your world ends. There are monsters, traps, and pitfalls that you should try to avoid and kill. In the battle system, there are over 100 different types of attacks. If you have the best character as your main character, you'll feel very difficult to win. It's a game that you can enjoy for hours while being entertained by the RPG system. And you don't have to worry about anything. Why did you ask this? I'm using a DDO for my project. This game is a light role playing game and you can see the size of the song is pretty big. I was wondering if you could do this for other games as well. Just letting you know. I'm not saying that the one you did was bad, it's great but i have another one which i'm working on. :) Of course i'll take your permission first to use it in my own projects as i only will ask you for a permission i would be using your work in a software i will be developing. If i take your permission, i will also make sure that my work will also have a permission usage and i would be very thankful if you can give me a permission usage aswell. I was wondering what my other role playing game would be like in terms of size? I have about 70,000 to 80,000 songs and i'm only testing here now. If it was another role playing game, it would take at least 50 or 60,000 songs. As a example, my Song of Fire and Water (Elve Kingdom) would be around 40,000 - 50,000 maybe. :) I wanted to know if you can do this for other games as well or only for.fall? The song would still be from that game though. You can do it for other games as well, I've already done this for one game. If you would like I'll be able to put in a request to record more songs for you as well!

Leak, Anecdotes From M-A-D Short Film DALLAS — If you told me there was a soundtrack for the movie Band of Joy, the new short film by Dallas-based sketch comedy group M-A-D Short Film, I wouldn't have believed you. But there is. And, too, a sort of instructional video for the members of M-A-D, who introduce each character to us in their own unique style via intro scenes. “So if you think of ‘going to a shrink,’” Andrew Norledge says, with a straight face, accompanied by eye-rolling and a little shake of the head, “this is you. And then there’s the guy next to you, and the girl above your head. And there are people in [the background], all right?” All right, then. But still, it seems impossible that we have a clip from a movie whose running time is less than 14 minutes long, which has been playing in a few of the theaters that show the work of this Dallas-based troupe (not available on Hulu or Amazon Prime) that includes Norledge and his sister, Lauren, who star as two depressed military veterans - one whose mother has refused to take him in, and one who’s been raised to think the world is better off not existing - and their friends, who use fake names to introduce each other and converse with their psychology office, most of them played by members of the M-A-D Short Film family: Megan McLemore and her husband, Andrew, Norledge, Bryce Norledge (also their son, and M-A-D’s production manager) and creator, director and part chief nerd (à la Scott Neustadter and Michael Hachenberger), Dan Haepshimer. “We’re movin’ to the zoo,” the lady in the business card tells us. “Let’s go to see animals. See if we can make the animals laugh.” That’s about as far as I’ve read into the movie prior to watching the clip, which is “extremely short” to M-A-D’s detractors, but not for their fans, like the couple I spoke with in the Players Nachos on Blanco exit, where they both sported peppy

of one of history's most mysterious artifacts - one that changed the world forever. In the world of The Immortal Iron Giant, mankind came into contact with giants - an advanced race of beings from another dimension, something that was completely unprecedented in human history. Imagine the horrors this discovery entailed for the humans, who would then be forced to decide how much of that other world they wanted to share with the giants. The main character of The Immortal Iron Giant is a tool created by the giants. It's an enormous sculpture made entirely out of scrap metal, and it's warmly regarded as a friend. While trying to figure out how to get the world's attention, the tool discovers a new and dangerous power. After fighting off an attack against the humans, the tool eventually finds a way to communicate with the humans and ends up starting a friendship between them. The war that would eventually decide mankind's fate began with the discovery of the giants, and the power of the Iron Giant would be a critical weapon. The first chapter of The Immortal Iron Giant takes place before the war between man and giant begins. The humans remain in the dark about the true intentions of the giants and are stunned when the giants attack their home. You get to join the giants in their siege of the human city and watch as they begin wiping out the humans and then demand asylum from the humans. This first chapter of the game will be the last entry in the legendary "Frozen Realm" storyline, and it's the last place where you'll need to defeat the boss before the rest of the game.

Key Features: Over 50 Minutes of Gameplay - You'll join the giants on their invasion of the human city. You'll be able to watch as they wipe out the humans, and you'll gain valuable experience throughout the first chapter.

Big Boss - It's safe to assume that you're familiar with the Iron Giant. He's a giant, made entirely out of scrap metal. Big Boss is the last giant standing, and he's become legendary.

Giant City - The ice giant's city is a grand palace that rises from the nearby ice. The city is so cold that you'll need to light it with fire. Unprecedented Game Mechanics - This is the first game to use a dynamic camera system and lightmap system. The detail level is incredible, and the game works amazingly well. An Immersive World - The environment is vastly different,
