[Analysis of the correlation between the concentrations of the azooson-the inhibiting agent of chloroform metabolism (CGCI) and the concentration of Cl- in blood with low molecular weight (LMW)]. On the basis of in vivo experimental data obtained in blood plasma there was found a significant negative correlation between the azooson inhibiting activity and the concentration of Cl- in blood plasma. The parameter of the high affinity binding of azooson was found to be a material level of Cl- in blood plasma. The azooson kinetics in blood plasma was studied with the aid of analytical calculations. The present invention relates to a color image forming apparatus for forming a color image of an original, and more particularly, to a color image forming apparatus with a paper feed sensor. With the development of the computer system technique, a color image forming apparatus has been proposed in which documents are successively read with a digital scanning system, image data of an original are produced and then color image data is produced. An example of such apparatus is disclosed in Japanese Laid-Open Publication No. 3-267055. The color image forming apparatus described in this literature comprises a first paper feed sensor which is used when a white copying original is read, and a second paper feed sensor which is used when a color copying original is read, whereby the rate of fixing for each color is constant. The detection of paper jams is also performed on the basis of a paper feed sensor because the paper cannot be inserted into a paper feed portion if no paper is inserted into the paper feed portion. With this arrangement, however, it is possible that, if the original being read is a color original, the detected result is that no paper is inserted because of the detection of an original of the color original which has the same reflective color as the color of the original to be copied. Thus, an error occurs in the detection of a paper jam and the copying operation must be stopped on the basis of the erroneous detection of the paper jam.
