Choose your language: elvi.vex.com.Q: Proper casting of a value I have the following piece of code and need to know if this is the proper way to do this: public class B { public int x; public void Set(int i)  $\{x = i, \}$  public class C  $\{$  public int x; public void Set(int i)  $\{$  if  $\{x = null\}$   $\{$ The first bit of code checks if x is null, if it is, it will call Set on x and set it using the second piece of code. I don't know if this is correct, first off. I know I can just put x = i in the second piece of code and it would work fine, but in this case, where a value is being assigned to x, wouldn't that cause a problem? I'm obviously talking about the line x = (B)i; A: It is not safe to cast from type A to a subtype B, if the runtime type of i is something else than A. For instance, if you have this code: public class A { } public class B : A { } you can only cast a B to an A, but not from an A to a B. As for the null check, you can do that safely with instanceof, but this way is easier to read. The Tocantins river turtles face a harsh climate that makes their environment nearly unsuitable for them and their survival, but the Brazilian Institute of Environment and Renewable Natural Resources (IBAMA), and the Brazilian Army decided it was time to make their home more suited for them and their ecosystems. The 'ecotour' is a new reserve that will protect the region from increased mining and deforestation in the area. This ecotour was created by the use of military helicopters and boats in order to take the turtles into the forest, 0cc13bf012

Johnny Depp's last movie is very similar in tone and mood to "BlackBook". Both movies are about people who enjoy the good and the bad (and the ugly, too), and who live with the knowledge that there will always be bad things which cannot be explained or anticipated. Both are about manipulation, and both show how easily things can get blown out of proportion. So while the two movies are quite different, they also share plenty of similarities. The Movie and Review. One of the few really great things about Johnny Depp is that he can convincingly play different characters. However, I don't think Depp is ever going to be as great as his onscreen persona, but even watching him play a character that is a character I don't believe is Depp at his best, he still comes close. You see that he gives an excellent performance here; he's not really a bad guy in the film, at least not any more than any of the other characters he plays, and it is fun watching him as he shares insights into the other characters' actions. It's no stretch to say that he's having a good time onscreen, and I can't help but wonder what he's really like in everyday life. Eyes Wide Shut. The "Opening Narration" is spoken by the narrator, and his description of the film's plot and characters is obviously hokey, but it works

Born in Caldwell County, North Carolina, Jefferson attended the common schools. He was graduated from LaSalle Military Academy at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1882 and from the Law Department of Mercer University, Macon, Georgia, in 1886. He was admitted to the bar in 1885 and commenced practice in Wadesboro, North Carolina. He served as prosecuting attorney of Caldwell County from 1898 to 1903. Jefferson was elected as a Democrat to the Sixtieth and to the eight succeeding Congresses (March 4, 1907 - March 3, 1923). He served as chairman of the Committee on Fish and Fisheries (Sixty-second through Sixty-ninth Congresses). He served as delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1924. He died in Macon, Georgia, October 23, 1924. He was interred in Fairview Cemetery in Wadesboro, North Carolina.
