winning side has been shot down by the Football Association. Chelsea and England midfielder Frank Lampard has revealed that FIFA and the Football Association criticised his side's achievements in the Champions League as he credits Liverpool for their title success in 2005. The Premier League champions beat Liverpool 3-0 in the 2005 final to secure their first title since 1955. Lampard claims Liverpool were the underdogs when they claimed the title and that's why they are credited for the triumph rather than Chelsea. He told The Times: "The previous year was more dramatic. We had won the league in the spring, lost the FA Cup semi-final and finished the season very strongly. "The shock of losing to the Rossoneri came as a bit of a surprise to us. We'd taken a 2-0 lead. As the game went on, they turned it around and won 3-0. They were a very good team, but we had played very well up to that point. They had been outsiders before, but we had won the league. Liverpool had a similar feeling, although they'd been the next team in. "To a degree, the British press just made up their minds that we'd done it without playing well. They said I didn't do enough in the final." Lampard claims the FIFA had conducted an investigation into his side's achievements and concluded that Liverpool were the true winners of the 2005 Champions League. He added: "For FIFA to give the trophy to someone else is a big responsibility. There are thousands of people who have to agree with that decision. There will be a lot of people there the next time there's a Champions League final."As Jermaine Jones leaves his post-

What's new in Laufen Und Raufen:

Series Vol. 1 A long time ago In a land far away…Long ago, in the twilight of night after a fierce rainstorm, a lone samurai drenched himself and sat about, weary, lost in thought. Lost in thought, indeed, to the point of insanity. He stared into the distance, reflecting on his life and his fate. For he was doomed to die. Death would be his end. In a flash of lightning, he wondered if fate would have mercy on his soul. For there was no way that the powerful Minamoto clan could agree upon one choice as their Tokugawa brother-in-law, because if that should happen, the victorious clan would claim victory and displace forever the head of the Minamoto clan, his anointed one as well. He was chosen just like that. His senior brother, Nobusada, had first married his sister, Kiyomi. And as an in-law of the Minamoto, among the Minamoto clan, Nobusada came to rule over the Minamoto. But their senior cousin sister, Noriyuki, refused to surrender her claim of the throne. And both had been forced to accept the rule of the criminal Yoshizawa clan. Nobusada, the former head, and Noriyuki, the former queen of the Minamoto came to depart from Edo (Tokyo) before the shogunate could kill them. But while they were readying themselves for a swift passage, there appeared in the midway of night a messenger by the name of Takeda Katsuyori. He came as their messenger of death. A ferocious clan warrior with a hero's reward for death, he demanded a right honorable meeting, and he begged the one in charge of the Minamoto clan. But what was to happen between that clan and the Takeda clan became a long war, a war of three clans, the Minamoto, the Takeda and the Tokugawa. The Takeda clan scorned the Minamoto, and the Minamoto clan scorned the Takeda clan. They were but brothers of the Takeda clan in the first place. As miniatures wars with tremendous warriors, Japan birthed the towering muscle and sheer force, legendary Katana-stabbings and ax-slashing of the Takeda and the Minamoto. But it was strange that as long as Nobusada was alive, the Minamoto clan had the
