History The was founded in 1963, as a representative body of students in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences of the University of Tsukuba. It was initially registered as a corporation and presided over by a president, who was chosen by the council and the Faculty Student Representative Council. After a long political struggle, the Faculty Student Representative Council broke ties with the in 1965. This decision was reversed in the same year, but the Faculty Student Representative Council was disbanded after the 1966 Student Representative Council elections. While the and the remained conservative student organizations, with their conservative supporters from the University Parent's Association, the new became a left-wing movement. The was involved in the Liberal Democratic Party-led student movements in the 1960s and 1970s, and was particularly active in the activism around the R-dialect debate.
