I feel like my week has just been a giant circle going back and forth. This week I am doing some work on a few different things. I want to get off the coaster of wanting too much and yet not accomplishing anything. My mind is always racing for several reasons. I have also decided this week that I want to get back into my evening walks around the nearby lake. I have a friend who is a nature photographer and I really enjoy looking at her photos. So, I decided to start taking some photo's of the lake again so I can share them with you. The weather has been pretty warm lately, so I know it will be nice to get outside and enjoy the sun. I will also be doing some paintings and will share some of them with you. I also wanted to share with you an assignment that I am participating in over at Scrapbook.com. We each have to create a layout about some significant women in your life. For my assignment I am creating a layout about my Mother. I started the layout about a month ago and have actually been working on it this week and I did some of the work on my own, but I also used some of the wonderful digital kits that are available there. I know I didn't share these kits with you a while ago, but I really like them and have found that sometimes kits just make my day. Anyway, I was challenged to make a layout about women. I chose women I love. I have lots of women in my life that have truly made a difference in my life and I wanted to share with you some of these women that I think of as most inspirational. In order of influence on my life they are as follows; 1) My mother, (sorry
