Absence of p21WAF1 expression in recurrent and metastatic colorectal cancer. It is widely accepted that p21WAF1 plays a role in the control of cell growth. However, the role of p21WAF1 in human cancer is not well understood. It has been reported that p21WAF1 is frequently down-regulated in colorectal cancer and is a useful prognostic marker of survival. In a previous study, we demonstrated that the administration of paclitaxel and irinotecan caused a marked induction of p21WAF1 expression in monolayer culture and in primary tumors. Here we report results of a comprehensive analysis of p21WAF1 expression in a large cohort of metastatic colorectal cancer (MCRC) patients treated with first-line chemotherapy. Nine of 22 patients with stage IV MCRC received chemotherapy as first-line treatment. From this cohort we selected the four patients with good outcome and four with poor outcome. All patients were treated with 5-fluorouracil and mitomycin C. p21WAF1 expression was examined by immunohistochemistry.
